

Seventy nine years of Italian engineering and it still can't climb a tree.

I suppose there are some who are easily impressed by an intricate blend of steel, leather and rubber. Showy is "nice" in much the same way rice is "filling".

But what about life outside the lines?

Can a car be funny? Can it write dynamic ad copy? Can it draw a crowd by its vocal eloquence? Can it even draw?

Thankfully the 2009 Charlie is everything an Italian coupe isn't - and more.

Just look at these Standard Features:

- * Vast Visual Arts background in Illustration, Design and Animation
- * Extensive Literary experience through Columns, Op-ed pieces and Ad copy work
- * Numerous years of critical International media exposure, both online and in print
- * Co-producer of Graphic Design USA Award winning material
- * Cyber Savvy, Tech Knowledgeable, borderline Computer Savant
- * Various Supervisory Roles and Team Leadership Skills

..and rudimentary Tree-Climbing Capabilities at no extra charge!

Blessed with an abundance of lateral creativity and a one-of-a-kind GPS, the 2009 Charlie can take you places garish European automobiles can only dream about.

So, if going somewhere at 200 mph is really that important to you I'd probably suggest the sports car.

For everything else – you know where to look.
